

I would be greatly disheartened if you made the State of NJ change the stringency of their do not call law. IT WORKS. I don't think that our phone should be constantly in use by phone calls I did not ask for, nor want. We are not friendly to telephone solicitations. Did you know that another definition of solicit is prostitution? We just don't want to be bothered with unnecessary calls. If I am interested in purchasing anything, I will look myself for the services. It was very annoying before when about 85% of my phone calls were from telemarketers. This law is a good one. In todays economy, let this industry fail, or they can do other forms of marketing. They can all go get other jobs or telemarket to the states that don't have stringent laws like NJ... or Let them just telemarket to the people who make the laws, not me. Now if you can do something about e-mail spammers, and junk postal mail that would be something good. But hey, if people want to pay money for stuff I throw into the trash...go for it! I'm glad they have money to throw away! I don't, and my time in answering the telephone to solicitors is too important to waste.
